We maintain a high level of confidentiality concerning our donors. Our staff has been trained in the handling and protection of personal information. Our staff understands that improper disclosure of personal data is a serious matter. If we ask an outside company to help us with ministry activities, we require it to adhere to the same standards as we do.

No affiliates or third-party non-affiliates will have access to your donor records, other than as necessary to assist us in administering our ministry activities. We never sell lists of the names and addresses of our donors to any vendor of goods or services, or to a vendor involved in charitable solicitation activities.

Access to your records is limited to:

- Our employees who are working with your charitable donation.
- Employees of organizations which are under contract with us and which adhere to our standards
